The Bluegrass Community Health Center, a sponsored program of Eastern Kentucky University, is dedicated to contributing to the lives of patients through the compassionate provision of comprehensive primary healthcare.

BCHC provides preventative and primary healthcare for pediatric, adult, and geriatric patients at two Lexington clinics. Services include acute care, chronic disease management, adult and pediatric physicals, well-child exams, immunizations and counseling. Case management is available to facilitate patients' connection with social services and specialist referrals, including diagnostic procedures, dental care and radiology. BCHC's dedication to serving a diverse population encouraged the employment of many Spanish/English bilingual employees to supplement Language Line interpreting service.

The BCHC was originally established in 2001, with a federal 330 health center grant to serve local farm workers. In 2007, additional grant funding awards allowed an expansion to serve the greater community, including low income families, the homeless, the uninsured, Medicaid and KCHIP recipients. Uninsured patients receive services based on a sliding fee scale. Most private insurance is also accepted.

From just over 900 patients in its first year, BCHC grew to serve over 6,000 patients in 2008 and projects further growth in the coming years. BCHC is currently welcoming new patients.
