Josh Allen adjusting to coaching change, playoff loss, foot surgery

BY JOHN WAWRO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The tears have long dried, though the pangs of regret remain for Josh Allen, who's still coming to grips over what transpired in the 12 days since the Buffalo Bills were eliminated from the playoffs. Add in having surgery for a broken bone in his left foot, and a sudden coaching change that had offensive coordinator Joe Brady promoted to take over after Sean McDermott was fired, and Allen has had little time to catch his breath. "I'm still trying to take it all in," Allen said Thursday after attending Brady's inaugural press conference. "There's just so many elements that come into play. Just trying to take it one day at a time." He added, "But I'd be lying to you if I didn't say I'm still sick to my stomach about how the season ended." Allen's comments were his first since breaking down in tears following a 33-30 overtime loss to Denver in a divisional-round playoff on Jan. 17. It was a outing in which his three touchdown passes were undone by committing four of Buffalo's five turnovers.
